mariner 2000

This was it, the turn of the century, the new millennium, the year 2000. We defeated the Y2K theory. The end of the world, once again, passed us by. So where were we going next?

We forced ourselves to be in this building by 7:30 in the morning, five days a week. Some of us didn't even make it here on time. We sat through six hours of classes ranging from industrial arts to English to Calculus, ate cafeteria food that was far from homemade, rushed to get to class in three minutes and make our way through the crowded hallways. Some of us were involved in school activities, played sports or just toughed through every class. No matter what we did, we were all here. We asked ourselves, "Now where do we go?"

We were going there, somewhere, a place where we were meant to be. We all had our own there; where it was, we didn't really know. Whether it was stirring up political scandals on Capitol Hill, running our own business or studying rare insects in a remote South American jungle, we were all going somewhere, some there.

So there we were, the pioneers of the millennium, getting ready to step out into the world. We may not have known where we were going or how we would get there, but there we were waiting. Anxious and excited, hoping for the best and ready to take our turn, we had only one question to ask...

Preparation is essential to having a successful debut. Actors and actresses in West Side Story spent months perfecting their stage performances. Tryouts began in the first week of January to ensure a nearly two-month time period for practicing. Although the play was only performed two nights, March 3 and 4, instead of the customary three nights of performances, Director Kathleen Milford wanted things to run smoothly. The actors and actresses had to prepare themselves physically and mentally. The two nights were grueling and exhausting for the thespians. The exhaustion was worth it for those Thespians performing in their last play at Harbor; seniors Tessa White, Samantha Younker and Brian Downey finished their fourth and final play as Harbor Thespians. # STAFF

Paving the way

Faculty and staff: friends, mentors and the backbone of the learning environment.

When the state placed the Ashtabula Area City Schools in "academic emergency," faculty and other staff members developed a Continuous Improvement Plan (CIP) to improve the system's status. Advisory committees of parents, staff and people from the community were also created to make sure the district was actively trying to improve.

Teachers were not only coaches, class and club advisors, but they also helped students through the perennial problems, such as preparing for prom. Sophomore class advisor Mrs. Marge Toivola enjoyed helping raise money for the inevitable: "I liked working with the class because they are so close. I hope that because of their closeness and the early start, prom will be more fun than stressful for them."

By the end of the year, the faculty became inspirations to their students. (Despite the whining, someone surely benefited from Mr. Todd Brandeberry's fetal pig dissections.) Faculty and staff made themselves accessible which allowed them to become people that the student body would remember for a long time to come.

WAS THIS "THERE"?

Flashing photos, four valedictorians and Mr. Brandeberry helped the Class of 2000 say goodbye

On May 31 in Fawcett Gymnasium, the first class of the millennium prepared for their commencement. This year's seniors proved themselves to be high achievers. With 4 valedictorians, over 30 seniors graduating with honors and 60% of the class passing all parts of the senior proficiency tests, the Class of 2000 earned over $500,00 in scholarship.

The ceremony began with the invocation given by Matt Lynagh and ended with the benediction by Christina Baker. Class President Taylor Lane presented the senior class memorial of a cordless microphone sound system. Near the close of the ceremony, Justin Ford and Brian Downey led the class in singing the "Harbor Hymn."

Praising the class for their achievements valedictorians Kristen Lillvis, Julie Bodnar, Jasmine Freebourn and Joseph Giannell reflected on memories and discussed the determination it took to reach their goals. Giannell summed up the challenges faced in athletics throughout the year by exclaiming, "Thank God for baseball."

Multimedia slide shows of the class's memories throughout their prior four years made the ceremony unique. Seniors Nicole Berg, Jeremy Massucci and Jamie Butler worked to put the show together with the help of computer teacher Mrs. Marianne Hornbeck and junior Charles Kachersky. The presentation flashed pictures to the music of Vitamin C's "Graduation" and Sarah McLachlan's "I Will Remember You."

Science teacher Todd Brandeberry's message to the seniors added to the unforgettable memory of the ceremony. Chosen by the graduates to speak for their class, Brandeberry said that family, God and self-discipline were key factors in life. He encouraged the graduates: "Let me assure you that there will be days when you don't want to get out of bed. But get up anyway, because the world is waiting for the difference you are going to make."

SENIORS

Remembering the years

Cap and gown- $16... Yearbook- $40...
Our senior year... Priceless.

When we recalled the memories created in the halls of Harbor High, most of us valued the same recollections, while others never looked back. From our reign as the Class Tournament champions to the annual Beat-Bula parades to homecomings and proms, we all took a bit of our years at Harbor with us as we set out to explore the "real world."

We remembered the courses we took. Attempting gymnastics in gym class, trying to figure out algebra or calculus and staying awake in study hall were just a few of the trials we faced through the years. We remembered the wisdom we acquired, the words of guidance offered and the unspoken inspirations.

And we never forgot the valued friendships or the everlasting spirit that lived forever in our hearts and in the halls of Harbor High. Years later our lives were changed but our experiences here always remained the same. If these days were not to be relived, they were definitely days to be remembered.

JUNIORS

On their way to the top

No longer underclassmen, juniors found themselves faced with many new responsibilities. Besides being most spirited at pep assemblies, dancing the Charleston and participating in class tournaments, juniors were responsible for ACT preparation, writing a career paper and planning the prom.

Starting their junior year with less than a $100 in their account for prom, juniors definitely had their work cut out for them. The class came together to raise over $4,000 in less than nine months. Funding came from car washes, Zap 'A' Snack pizza sales, and dozens of 50/50 raffles.

Greg Johnson commented on one car wash, "We washed cars from Great Lakes Auto during the summer. Lots of people showed up to help. We had a lot of fun that day and made $400 from it."

Class President Sarah Koski added, "It was a lot of hard work but we earned the money. I was surprised by how many students were willing to help out."

SOPHOMORES

When the pressure and sometimes humiliation of being a freshman was over, sophomores could finally be normal high school students. They were good fund-raisers, from their fantastic efforts during Halloween selling candy on Bridge Street, to their multiple sales on Valentine's Day. They had fun too: Their theme for class tournaments was "Dance Club 2002."

To plan for their futures, they took the ASVAB test during long hours in the cafeteria and a trip to the vocational school. Harbor provided many memories for sophomores. An extremely active Tim Elliot said, "I'll always remember Harbor, and of course my last year of gym class with Mr. Kiphart."

FRESHMEN

Opening new doors

Will I get lost? Will I fall prey to the upper-classmen? Will I meet new friends? These questions were something all freshmen had in common: apprehensions of the terrors of high school.

After a week or two these worries vanished and most freshmen got excited about the new world ahead of them. High school clubs, Homecoming, and the traditional Beat Bula Parade were all adventures they had never experienced in junior high. "I went to the Beat Bula parade and everyone there really got into cheering and wanting to win the game. The students in junior high were never like that," said David Younker.

When all fears and apprehensions had disappeared, the freshmen looked forward to their next three years as upperclassmen. "Being a freshmen isn't all that bad. Being in clubs and going to homecoming were nice as new adventures, but I really can't wait to be a junior so I can go to prom," said Crystal Crytzer.

Exploring new horizons

Not everyone knows what they want to do after high school. A few lucky Harbor students had their futures all planned and took the first leg of their journey at the Ashtabula County Joint Vocational School.

The Vo-Ed offered many trade courses—from Culinary Arts and Cosmetology, to Precision Machinery and Auto Body. Students took trade, lab, and required classes, spending as many as four periods a day learning valuable career skills.

All their hard work paid off, for many had early placement jobs before graduation and most were placed in a job upon graduation. At the Vo-Ed, students not only learned a trade but also valuable life skills that would help them in their future as dedicated working adults.

A SEASON TO REMEMBER

Just another volleyball season? Think again. This year the nine seniors that led the Lady Mariners came to a group decision: to stop at nothing short of the NEC title. After playing as a team for over four years, this was definitely the year to go out with a bang.

With new coach Lisa McQuoide at the helm, the Mariners no longer had to bear Mr. Frank Roskovic's tortuous "ropes" but instead were incessantly tormented by McQuoide's commands of "wall" which meant they were in for some grueling minutes of sprints and squats. Though the team fell short of its goal, the Lady Mariners were definitely supported every step of the way. Fans packed the gymnasiums and even traveled to the district tournament in LaBrea to cheer on the girls.

The team lost nine seniors, but they left many memories behind. Nicole "Skunky" Rodriguez's peppiness at early practice, bus rides filled with "Blum" impressions, treats compliments of Coach's mom and the most frequently spoken word—"PHELPS!"—will always be remembered. ~ Kristen Shick

DRIVING FOR THE TITLE

Coach Pat Colucci had dreams of "putting Harbor golf back on the map." Dreams of an NEC title were not far from the reach of Harbor's second placed NEC golf team. However, their grasp began to weaken as tournament competition dropped the Mariners into fourth place.

Mike Peet and Kyle Williams received Second Team All-NEC honors, while the team placed fourth in the NEC tournament. Peet and Mike DeWitt had the team's lowest scoring average.

"We set several goals as to what we wanted to accomplish this season," said Coach Pat Colucci. The team ended with a 12-4 record, placing fourth in the NEC.

Though tournament competition may have brought on too much pressure, the team reached several team and personal goals. A positive attitude, better work ethic, stronger performance, and a desire to win were just a few of the goals this year's team accomplished. With the loss of one varsity letterman, Williams, the team hoped to challenge the championship once again in the 2000 season.

ACHIEVING EXCELLENCE

Having only one four-year player on a sports team is unusual, but when that person is a four-year letterman, voted most valuable player and first in the NEC, then that person deserves some recognition for her accomplishments. In the '99 season, that person was second singles player Sarah DeAnna.

Finishing the season with a record of 9-3, DeAnna didn't let anyone stand in her way of victory. "I never thought I could do this, but I practiced over the summer because I knew what kind of competition I was up against. The season was hard, but the satisfaction of winning was amazing," she said.

Besides DeAnna, three other lettermen returned to the team—Allison Hutchinson, Carrie Williams and Samantha Younker. First doubles team Hutchinson and Younker earned third place in the NEC tournament. Third singles player

Williams earned fourth place in the NEC. She remarked, "I didn't play as well as I wanted to, but it was definitely a learning experience."

Being both first-year players and seniors was tough on Jennifer Silva and Carissa Powell. "This is my first year and I have improved a lot, so I am glad I decided to play," said Powell. Playing together as a second doubles team, they placed fourth in the NEC.

Another first-year player on the team, Abby Cusman, was also the only freshman. Because of this, she had to play her best to earn a top position on the team. Improving during the summer practices, she played first singles when the season started. "It was kind of awkward because all of the other players were seniors, but they made me feel like part of the team," said Cusman.

CLIMBING THAT HILL

Cross country is the ultimate test of endurance, and no one endured more than the cross country team. They made great strides throughout the season despite disappointments.

Due to a lack of participants, the team was unable to technically qualify for meets against other NEC teams. However, the handful of dedicated athletes competed wholeheartedly.

The NEC meet in mid-October was the climax of the season; the runners had climbed the hill and finally reached the apex. Senior Joe Sass and sophomore April Pandora achieved the best times for boys and girls, respectively. Sass was also the first runner since 1996 to break the "20 minute barrier."

The last meet of the season was the district meet in Perry. Senior Kristen Lillvis said, "The district meet was the perfect end to my senior year. The Perry Outdoor YMCA is the nicest course we have the opportunity to run." Though the team was strong, they failed to send a runner to the state meet for the first time in three years.

MARINERS SAIL IN ROUGH WATERS

"The important thing is they never gave up," reflected Coach Mike Hassett. Hassett saw the team through a rough season. Losing twenty-one lettermen, the Mariners battled obstacles every step of the way. Led by senior captains Ken Fortune, Matt Lynagh, Ben Sedmak and Chad Stickle, many rookie players were given the chance to experience the thrill of the game.

Ending the season with only one victory to Pymatuning Valley, the team was still able to maintain high spirits. Players triumphed in their own personal victories.

Senior Ben Sedmak was the only fourth-year lettermen. Sedmak also succeeded in breaking the school record by rushing 348 yards at the Pymatuning game. Junior Nathan Tackett led the team with the most tackles.

Players earning All-County Distinction were first team offense, Matt Lynagh; first team defense, Rob McEndree; and second team defense, Nathan Tackett. Great effort along with determination was put forth by all members of the team.

LET'S GET FIRED UP

With the resignation of previous advisor, Miss Amy Bernower, came many changes to the Harbor cheerleading program. First was the new addition to the Mariner cheerleading arsenal, Miss Katie Ketchum. Ketchum, a former HHS cheerleader, bravely stood up to fill the vital role which Bernower left behind.

Along with the addition of Ketchum, the girls had much to look forward to. "It's just so exciting because it's my senior year!" exclaimed Nicole Berg. Although no one had to be a senior to get excited about the season, Berg surely spoke for all the veterans.

One of the most anticipated events was the Homecoming festivities. Not only did the cheerleaders participate in the annual parade down Lake Avenue, they also got to dress up varsity football players as members of a rival school's court. Perhaps the most thrilling honor, just introduced this year, was the crowning of the Homecoming King, which was done by the varsity captains!

Besides all the "spirit" activities, there were responsibilities of scrapbooks, locker signs, pep assemblies and competition. "Yeah, we have a lot to do, but it's fun cheering on my friends!" said Lacey Landis.

Staying above last place proved to be quite a challenge for the Mariners, who ended the season, 4-17.

"The guys worked just as hard during the season as any other team," stated Coach Dan Craft. "They just didn't put in as much time during the off season as they could have," he added.

The season was definitely one of highs and lows, seemingly with more lows. After losing senior forward Ben Sedmak to a foot injury with seven weeks left in the season, Craft was left with an inexperienced bench.

Jaime Presciano was the team's saving grace, averaging 17.6 points per game, ranking him first in scoring in the NEC. He also lead the NEC in three-point field goals with 48.

Senior Marco Fasano took charge at the point and represented Harbor in the Star Beacon All-Star Classic. Steve Novak lead the team in rebounds pulling down at least five per game.

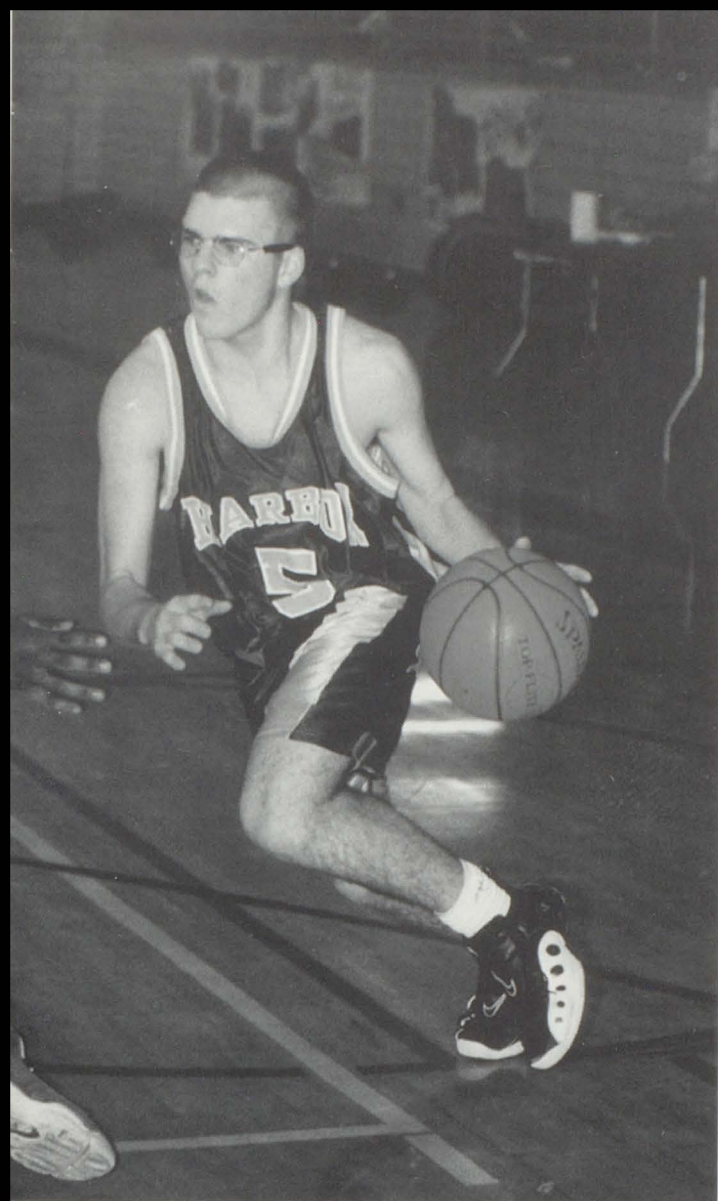

Though the season was not flawless, Craft commented, "The team played hard up until the very last buzzer sounded."

PINNING THE OPPOSITION

With only three seniors and one junior returning the Mariners had a very young team. Coach John Anservitz stated that his "expectations were limited". He did not know how his team would hold up in NEC competition.

The Mariners increased all expectations going 11-8 overall in dual meets and placing fourth in the NEC at 3-4.

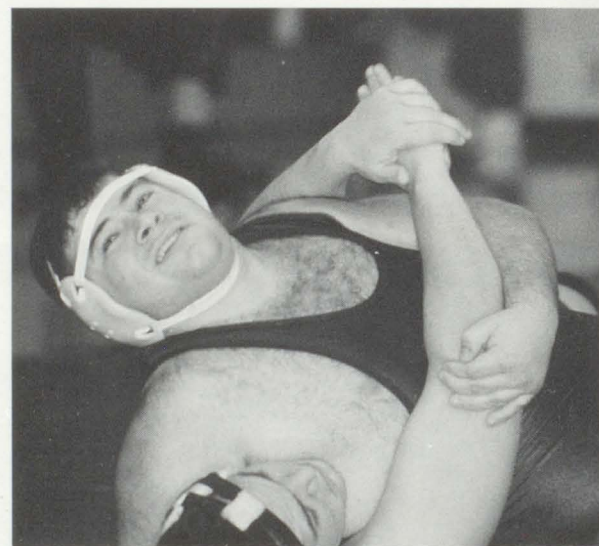

The NEC tournament was an extreme high point of the season for the Mariners, who had seven placers. Chris Turner placed first in his 103 weight class, making him Harbor's only NEC champion. Other wrestlers who placed at the division tournament included Cory Thomas, Greg Seuffer, Maurice Turner, Devin Carmen, Max Holik and Jarrod Kangas.

Anservitz commented on the team's performance, "I loved how we fought back through the consolations in the last two rounds of the Sectional tournament."

The post season was also big for the Mariners. Four wrestlers—Turner, Carmen, Holik and Kangas—traveled to the District Championships.

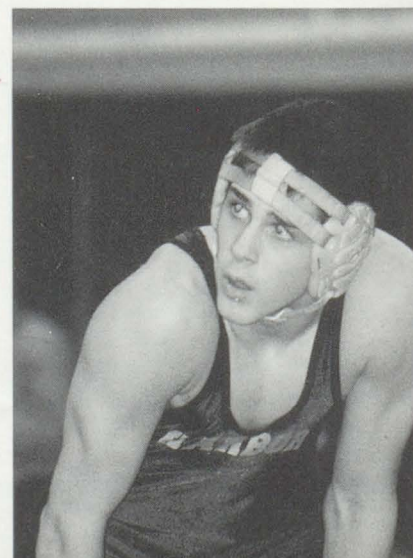

The Mariners surpassed their coaches expectations as well as their own. The underclassmen worked hard and stepped up to earn respect and contribute to the team's record. The team had hopes for an even more successful season the following year, with the possibility of several members traveling to district and state tournaments.

STRUGGLING FOR A VICTORY

A young team with only five seniors didn't do as well as they hoped for the season. Finishing the season with an overall record of 3-17 and an NEC record of 2-12, the team tried but failed to stay out of last place.

Even though the team struggled against their opponents, most games were close. One of the many close games was at

P.V. and the team only lost by three points. The team did manage a win over rival team Bula with a score of 56-40. The other two wins of the season were against Chardon and Harvey. "Most of the team is young so next year they will have great season," said senior Nicole Rodriguez.

FACING THE CHALLENGE

"Cut the wagon loose!" Coach Paul Bodnar constantly repeated when trying to encourage the girls to hustle. However, he never thought to remind the girls the importance of having one player on base. This created an exciting game against rival Ashtabula.

It began when Abby Cusman rushed to second base, after Jamie Parker made a hit, not realizing Parker was on her way to second base where they were both caught. Parker found herself caught in a run down between first and second while Cusman raced to home. Parker managed her way safely back to first as Cusman slid into home.

"The game was one I'm sure no one will forget, especially since we ended up winning," commented J.V. member Darci Pizzi, who witnessed the event while keeping score for the varsity game.

The season ended 6-7, leaving the senior girls with many softball memories. Seniors Danise Mozingo, Keri Fitzgerald and Angela Keaton ended their softball season as four-year letter winners. Three-year lettermen included Julie Bodnar, Jamie Butler and Jamie Parker.

The boys of summer were back and they looked better than ever. The Mariner baseball team celebrated a monumental season with a record of 15-10, 6-7 in the NEC.

Leading the Mariners was a veteran pitching staff of Kyle Williams, Matt Umholtz and Steve Novak. The team also boasted an explosive line-up. Harbor baseball satisfied all three elements of a successful team: pitching, hitting and defense.

"Our hitters are real aggressive, but at the same time, they've learned to lay off bad pitches. There's no weak spot in our line-up," said Coach Dan Craft.

Impressive statistics can only get a team so far. The Mariners displayed an undeniable sense of comradery. Senior rightfielder Ben Rich comments, "You could tell right from the start that we had unbelievable team chemistry. We're all friends off the field. We all push each other."

When the dust had settled, the Mariners had claimed fourth place.

RUNNING FOR THE GLORY

This year's track season was full of triumphs and upsets. The team had been lacking in numbers throughout much of the 1990s and coaches were hoping that a new millennium would also be a rebirth of sorts for the sport they love. Although fewer than 30 participants for boys and girls track competed, coaches Warren Dillaway, Bob Josson and Lisa McQuoide made the best out of the teams they were given.

The teams were lacking in veteran participation. However, the seven seniors that did return gave 110% in everything they did.

Matt Lynagh, Ken Fortune and Sarina Howe were the only members that earned the chance to compete in the regional arena. Lynagh ran the 800 meter at Kent Roosevelt High School against some of the best middle distance runners in the state. Although he failed to qualify for the state track meet, Fortune threw a personal record of 53 feet in the shotput at regionals. In only her second year of competition, Howe hoped that by the next season she would be able to make her way out of regionals to state. Howe qualified for the regional meet in the 300 meter hurdles.

Although failing to send anyone past regional competition, the track team finished the season with high hopes for future years.

SERVING UP THE FUN

As tennis balls and sweat flew 'round the court, the boys' tennis team competed in another season with energy, determination and enthusiasm. Although they finished with a less than stellar record of 2 and 12, the team often ended just short in many of their matches, losing by one match.

There were, however, a few bright spots for the team. For example, two players — Justin Nigro and Matt Santill — advanced in sectionals on May 10. "Sectionals were a learning experience for all of us. I can't wait to see how we do next year," said Santill.

Another bright spot for the team was that it would remain relatively intact for future seasons. Having only one senior on the team—first-year player Shawn P. Miller—was unusual. Nevertheless, though the team was young, they fared well against the tough veteran competition in the NEC.

"It was fun; I wish I had played the other three years also," said Miller.

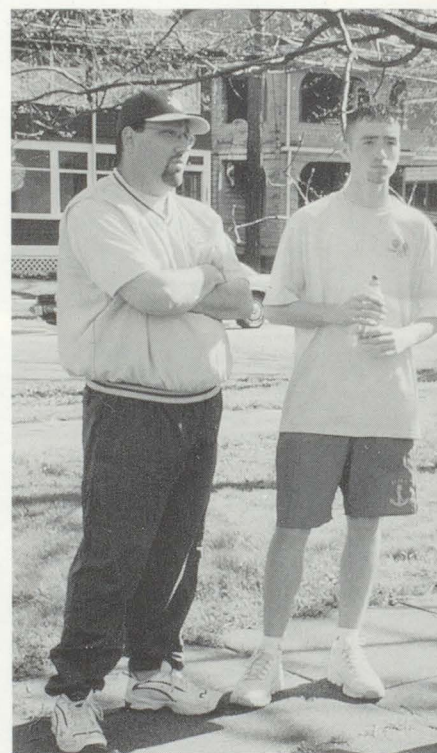

"This team came in inexperienced, and at the end of the season we were all much more confident with our abilities," said Nigro.

Mariner sports thrive through the years

The varsity basketball team of 1920, probably never worried that their canvas Converse shoes didn't match the color of their uniforms, like many of today's players that sport Nikes and Reeboks accented with purple and gold swoosh marks or slashes. At one time track-and-field was considered a man's sport, now it is not uncommon to see girls breaking records in field events as well as on the track. Nicole Rodriguez prepares herself before throwing a shot-put in practice.

The rules may not change but the equipment sure has. Football has remained a dominating sport at Harbor from 1920 to 2000. Shannon Messina (77) and Matt Keene (50) head to the locker room after a grueling first half.

From knickers with knee-high stockings and half-court games to tank-tops with shorts and full court presses, girls basketball has definitely seen changes in uniform as well as rules and regulations. The Championship team of 1922 poses for a victory photo. The Lady Mariners of today, Angela Keaton, Jamie Parker and Lauren Blum take time before a game to braid each other's hair.

America's favorite pastime has seen few changes since 1920. This year's team gathers for a pep-talk before the start of a new inning.

FROM THERE TO HERE

Students get involved through the years

No longer an all male Leader's Club (below), Student Council now organizes events and helps to better the school environment. Seniors Kristen Lillvis and Joe Giannell discuss decorating plans for the St. Patrick's Day dance, to benefit Jessica Reese, a six-year old diagnosed with cancer.

The Harbor band has faced few changes in the music and modifications of instruments. The orchestra of 1921 poses with their traditional instruments. Today, a concert band has replaced the orchestra, but the most popular is the Mariner Magic Marching Band, the group preforms in parades as well as football halftime shows.

Staff members in 1921 probably never had to worry about computer viruses or had parties to celebrate the end of a yearbook deadline. Melody Shiflet and Kristen Shick share a laugh over their Christmas gag-gifts.

The Commercial Club of 1931 worked hard to better area businesses. This year's Business Club traveled to New York City to visit the famous New York Stock Exchange and explore the city. (above) Members Justin Hammond and Devin Carmen wait for the rest of their group before a walking tour of the city.

Members of the 1922 Glee Club pose for a group photo in front of the school. Though a glee club no longer exists at Harbor, the Harbor Choir and Madrigals continue to entertain the community in chorale concerts. Members of the chorus, Jen Williams, Crystal Crytzer, Brittiani McNeil and Laura Lynagh warm-up for a concert in the cafeteria.

Colophon

"Are We There Yet?," the 2000 Mariner Millennium yearbook, was printed by Herff/Jones Yearbooks in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania. Press run was nearly 300 copies for Volume 88. Mark Potteiger served as sales representative. The cover and theme were chosen at a summer workshop in Marion, Indiana. The cover photo was taken by Ms. Terri Tisch (Sara's aunt) and printed in full color Permacote on a Vista Litho cover with gloss lamination. The text part was 80 bound Bordeaux. All color pages were featured in two flats of full cover.

The body text font was Bell Gothic, captions were Arial and folios were in Reindeer. Headline fonts included Albertus Medium, Bodoni Bold Condensed, Architecture and AGaramond Bold.

Yearbooks were sold for $40 until Nov. 23, and $45 until the end of the school year. The staff sold approximately $8,000 in advertising. That, along with book sales, financed the publication.

Special thanks to Annette Cevera and Olga Guerra (Ben Rich's grandmother and great grandmother) for the loan of the 1920, 1921 and 1931 Mariner yearbooks, Barbian Studios for film and photos, City Engineer Joe Perry for the maps featured on the endsheets, Matt Lynagh for his wrestling copy and all his help, Chris DeCamillo for his photography and video camera, Charles Kachersky, our technical savior, for all of the times he revived our computers and created our PowerPoint advertisements. Finally the Mariner staff would like to thank Charlie Jones, Martha Miller, Myrtle Wetherbee and rest of Harbor's custodial staff for unlocking doors, cleaning around us and providing some much needed comic relief on those late nights in Room 24.

A letter from the Editor...

How many hours did I spend in this room or even at home working on the yearbook? Well, I lost count after about 240. Yeah, I know what you are thinking, and yes, at times I felt pathetic, but look at this book. It would not be here if I hadn't stayed here until 9:00 pm to meet a deadline, if I had not come to school sick when I spent the whole morning lying in bed wondering if I could get up without vomiting, if I had not had to be "devil" editor, if I hadn't had nightmares about missed deadlines, if I hadn't cried when I was overwhelmed (my own fault), or if I hadn't had a staff that worked hard for me (although not always with me and often at their own pace). If I hadn't done all of that, you would not have a yearbook for the first year of the new millennium.

No, I am not saying that I deserve all the credit, but you'll never realize the amount of work and sacrifice that creating a yearbook entails. This may not be the greatest annual you have ever owned, or even something that you will want to keep on your shelf, or maybe you won't even want to admit that you own one, but despite all of that, I am proud of this book and the staff that helped me create it. I know that I wasn't always understanding when it came to why things were not getting done, and now I would like to say thank you to my staff and advisors. Without them I probably would not have survived the year.

Jaclyn - I know at times you didn't know what to do with yourself and you felt as if you wanted to get out of here as soon as you walked in the door. You worked hard when you needed to, and I know how difficult that is considering that I was in your shoes last year. I thank you for everything.

Liz (Lizzie, Lizbeth) - You were my sanity, whenever I needed it. There were so many times that you caught those spelling errors and tiny mistakes that I wondered what I would have done without you. I thank you, and I am sure that all the people whose names are spelled correctly thank you too.

Marisa - The year started out a little rocky, but you survived. We all survived! Thank you for those countless hours after school when you were pressed for time. Just know that I really do appreciate your work and what you have done for this book.

Kristen - I know for sure that I would not have made it if it weren't for your quirky little habits and ability to help me realize that I took things way too seriously. I'll never forget the captions without names in them or the little organized messes of papers that would surround your working area. Thank you.

Melody - Your sense of humor and antics made first period very interesting at times. I thank you for those hours after school and the comic relief you applied to make me feel just a little better when you knew things were pretty crappy.

Samantha (Sammy the Seal) - Yeah, we butted heads a few times, you probably wanted to kill me about three times, but hey I think that we have become better friends after all of that. You gave a lot of your time to this book, along with everyone else, and I thank you for pointing out my mistakes and helping me get through the year.

Oh...Jen - How could I forget you? You helped us keep the room in some type of order. The negative filing was really helpful, along with all of your walks down to the office and helping relieve our writer's block when it came to writing captions.

Mrs. Moroski - I cannot thank you enough for all that you have taught me. Without you, I would probably have been committed.

Finally...Mrs. Planisek - I thank you for all of the time you spent trying to keep the chaos, that is the yearbook finances, in order. Your absence during your surgery was definitely felt. We all missed you and were so happy when you came back.

OK, I am almost done... I'd like to thank everyone here at Harbor, staff and students. This is your book too. I apologize for any misspelled names or improper identifications, but you must understand how hard it is to get EVERYTHING right when eight people try to put a 176-page book together in one school year.

Sincerely, Sara Taylor

A letter from the Assistant Editor...

Let's just say that I had no idea what I was getting myself into at the time that I signed up for yearbook. I thought: get to take pictures, write some captions—how hard can that be? I never once thought of all the work that it actually involves. I have to admit that at many times I found myself trying to think up any way to get out of it.

Looking back on the year, I realize that yearbook has been an incredible experience for me. It has taught me a lot about others and myself and made me realize that I in no way want to pursue a career in advertising. Over this last year, the halls of Harbor along with the clock on Mrs. Moroski's wall have become more familiar to me than ever. I have spent many nights after school to complete my spreads and make my deadlines.

Our staff was great at procrastinating leaving much of the "work" to Sara. She has had incredible dedication throughout the year and a great deal of the success of this book should be credited to her along with Mrs. Moroski. Although our staff was small and at many times behind, I truly believe that we created a great yearbook. I wish all of the staff the best of luck in the future.

-Jaclyn Colucci-
